The European Fish Price Report, based on information supplied by industry correspondents, aims to provide guidance on broad price trends. Price information is indicative and FAO is not responsible for any errors or omissions. Prices are used to show medium to long-term trends.

LATEST TRENDS

Excluding currency effects, a stable to increasing trend continues to characterize many European import prices as reported by correspondents. Frozen tuna prices appear to have stabilized at recent relatively high levels while warmwater shrimp prices remain broadly stable at relatively low levels. Some increases are reported for frozen groundfish fillets, round herring, coldwater shrimp and squid products. A notable exception to the upward trend is in the mackerel market where prices for the current season are likely to be lower than those of recent seasons. In chilled aquaculture markets, trends appear mixed with the upward trend for turbot continuing while seabass and seabream prices are again weaker this month. Salmon prices are unsettled.

GROUNDFISH

Alaska pollack

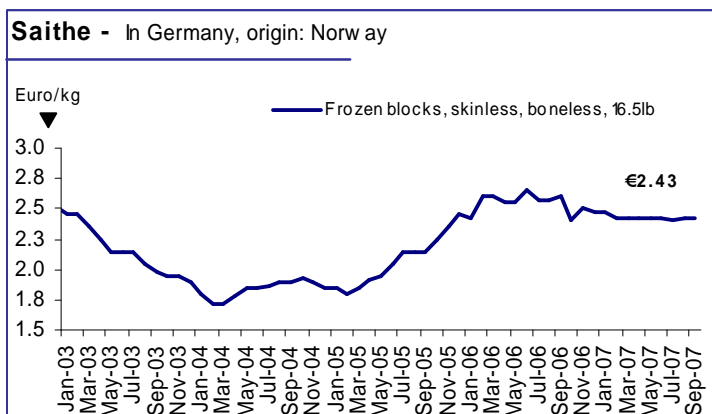

In Germany, origin: Russian Federation/USA

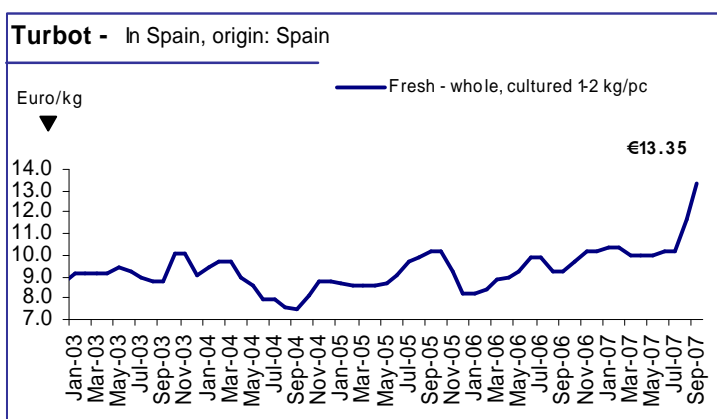

Price trends for frozen groundfish fillets remain broadly stable to increasing compared to last month. In the Alaska pollock market, pin bone-in fillets are stable at US$2.55/kg for product of Russian origin while pin bone-out fillets are quoted some 1-3% higher at between US$2.875 and 2.95/kg depending on origin. Hake fillets of Chilean origin (M. gayi) are also reported stable in dollar terms at between US$3.40-3.50/kg. The price trend for European species also appears stable to increasing with prices for Atlantic cod fillets (processed in China) described as increasing while saithe fillet prices are reported stable.

Recent Norwegian trade figures suggest, however, an upward price trend for frozen saithe fillets with average unit values for August exports up almost 20%, to NOK22.23/kg, on those for July. An indication for Atlantic cod mince (A grade) is stable compared to the August level at €1.88/kg.

FLATFISH

The upward price trend for farmed turbot noted last month has continued into September with medium to strong increases reported for all size grades but particularly those over 2kg. Once again, price increases are underpinned by buoyant demand and slow growth rates at farm level. Cif Spain indications for the 2-3 kg grade are up over 20% on prices reported in August and up almost 60% on September 2006.

Current price levels are expected to continue into October when lower water temperatures are likely to help lift growth rates in the farms.

In the frozen flatfish market, an fob (the Netherlands) price indication for plaice is reported 4% lower than the August level at €2.15/kg.

TUNA

The European tuna market remained unchanged during the summer holidays. Whole round yellowfin (10 kg and up) continues to command over €1 800/tonne in Spain as a result of a tuna fishing ban in the Eastern Tropical Pacific and of disappointing landings in the Indian Ocean. In an apparent effort to lower the market price of tuna, Indian Ocean tuna processors withdrew buying interest or lowered their offer prices. EU boat owners reacted by turning to other markets, including Thailand. According to EPR correspondents, Thai packers reacted to this apparent increase in available supply by lowering their price expectations.

PELAGICS

The main European mackerel season has got underway in Norway although fishing, and markets, are reported slow. Japanese demand appears weak with buyers awaiting the outcome of the domestic mackerel fishery in Japan. Partly as a result, current prices are down on 2005 and 2006 levels. Fob indications for the 400-600 gr grade of frozen round fish are around NOK9.50/kg which compares to NOK12/kg reported in September 2006 and to NOK15.50/kg reported in September 2005. Price indications for smaller grades are also lower this year although the differences are less marked than for the medium 400-600 gr grade.

In contrast to mackerel, strong demand is reported for round herring. A cif (St Petersburg) indication for round frozen 300 gr+ fish is at US$0.85/kg which compares to US$0.80/kg around this time last year.

CEPHALOPODS

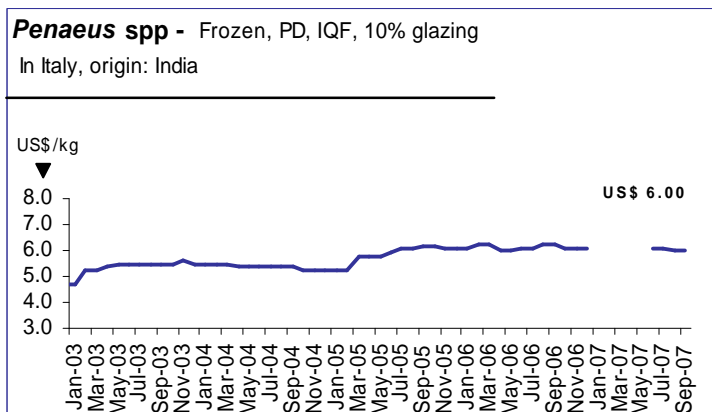

Lower frozen squid landings and stocks are reported in several countries including India, Peru and South Africa. With good European demand, prices appear to be on an upward trend and increases are reported this month for round squid in the Spanish market. A cif indication for medium South African Loligo squid is around €6.70/kg this month, an increase of 3% on last month. Increases are also reported for round Loligo squid of Indian origin. A cfr price for Indian Loligo tubes is, on the other hand, unchanged at US$6.80/kg in Italy. In the Italian cuttlefish market, weaker prices (-5%) compared to July levels are indicated for several grades of whole cleaned product of Thai origin.

CRUSTACEANS

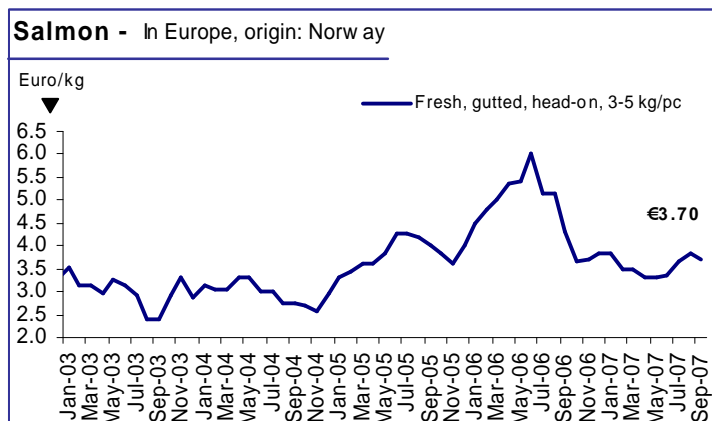

European market price trends for frozen warmwater farmed shrimp of Indonesian origin are described as steady. Upward price movements have been dampened by the availability of cheaper Thai shrimp in recent weeks. Price stability is also reflected in unchanged indications in the Italian and UK markets for PD and PUD shrimp of Indian origin. A cfr (Italy) price for the 250-350 pcs/lb grade of Penaeus PD shrimp is unchanged on last month at US$6/kg.

In the coldwater segment, a slight upward price trend is reported for cooked and peeled shrimp in the UK market. Sterling price indications (ddp) for Norwegian product have increased between 3 and 12% since June with the strongest increase for the 250-350 pcs/lb at £1.68/lb. No major changes are reported for prices of cooked shell-on product.

SALMON

The European salmon market seems unsure about which direction to take with prices vacillating within a rather narrow band. Export volumes from Norway have increased week by week after the end of the holiday season but price levels have not settled. Persistent production problems in Chile continue to influence the European frozen market and thereby indirectly the fresh market and contribute to support the European price levels. So far in 2007, total Chilean export volumes to Europe are about the same as in 2006, with the exception of Russia where exports more than doubled from 5000 tons to 11000 tons in the first six months of 2007.

SEABASS/SEABREAM

As expected, bass and bream prices have continued to soften after the peak levels reached during the summer months. In the seabass market, prices of 200-300 gr/pc and 1000 gr/pc and above specimens remained stable, whilst prices of 300 to 1000 gr/pc specimens declined. In particular, prices of 800-1000 gr/pc specimens dropped by 5.2 percent from August. In the seabream market, prices of 200 to 600 gr/pc specimens declined, with 450-600 gr/pc specimens dropping by 11.1 percent from August values. In turn, prices of specimens from 600 to 1000 gr/pc and above remained steady. This downward trend for seabass and seabream prices usually reaches its bottom in November before prices increase again for the Christmas season.
